TOPIC DISCUSSION:

1. Dr. Lane facilitated the committee discussion the research article “Empowering future literacy instructors: the role of mastery experience in pre-service teachers’ literacy knowledge and self-efficacy” (Law, Boese, Roy, Boese and Scholes 14, Augst 2025).

Questions surfaced as a result of the conversation to include:

- A. What does field and practicum experience look like now and how are we assessing the impact on pre-service teachers (PSTs)?
- B. What does the research indicate is the necessary amount of time (dosing) to reach mastery of the teaching of Structured Literacy for a novice educator?
- C. When is cognitive science taught in pre-service programs and is the content embedded or explicitly included as a course?
- D. What is the flexibility to match skill development with PST learning continuum and the placement school's structure?

The committee also discuss the necessity for universities to connect with their partner school districts and to align the literacy experiences with the district's Accreditation Plan (KESA).

Additionally, Dr. Curtis shared the draft structured literacy look for tool that is in the pilot stage in districts. The committee was interested in exploring how this new observation tool might be used in educator preparation.

2. Additional discussion is needed to identify a common language pertaining to “field experiences,” practicum, student teaching, and clinical. Dr. Lane recommended that we engage the faculty to discuss how these important aspects of educator preparation are defined; what is currently being done to ensure PSTs have experience in authentic settings with skilled mentors and faculty to provide immediate feedback.
3. Dr. Carlson adjourned the committee meeting at 5:30
